Embrace and require agricultural education

I suspect that the school bus load of students always watched the drop-off at our driveway, just in case my kids successfully tackled me. Up until the gentler hugs of this school year, my kids initiated a full-bore sprint and embrace from the bus. To control their momentum, I hooked them under the arms and spun them with feet suspended. Occasionally, I would just turn and run from them to initiate a chorus of giggles.

I thank my husband for the opportunity to get our kids off the bus every day and thanked our school's agriculture teacher for the conversations that followed the recent bus drops. Nearly every day of the second quarter, our fifth grader came home retelling her agriculture lesson without prompt. She told me about the characteristics of corn and differences in field corn, sweet corn and popcorn. She cracked open an egg to identify its parts, including the chalaza, air cell and germinal disc not referenced in recipes. She talked about free-range and conventional caged chickens. We watched videos on beekeeping and more than once listened to inspirational speakers from the National FFA Convention on YouTube.

At the end of each week's lesson, the teacher introduced a food item related to the unit, such as hand-made ice cream for dairy and honeycomb for beekeeping. My daughter found a new favorite apple variety during their apple unit. The class even made pumpkin pie in a cup in honor of their lessons on Illinois' pumpkin production. The teacher successfully reached their brains through their stomachs, and appropriately so. What better way to impress agriculture's impact on their lives than through food.

People cannot live a day without agriculture, yet most students can spend their educational career with no mandate to learn about the industry that feeds them, provides their clothes and partially fuels their cars. Every high school should require students to take agriculture coursework, which teaches about the food, fiber and fuel industry that impacts their daily lives. Schools should more widely embrace the subject area to teach math and science concepts through an agriculture lens. They should mandate agriculture coursework to prepare educated consumers, similar to required consumer education courses. Along the way, students learn about the industry's career opportunities, which extend far beyond farming. And FFA offers the chance to apply classroom agriculture lessons to develop life and leadership skills, spur personal growth and foster career success, whether in an agricultural field or not.

Agriculture ranks as our daughter's favorite subject in school. Thankfully, she intends to choose agriculture coursework along her path to high school graduation and adulthood. If only our collective education system would run and embrace agricultural education, as our 11-year-old has. About the author: Joanie Stiers' life revolves around family and farming in West-Central Illinois.

Ag in the Classroom Update – Roxanne Green

December brought trees into the classrooms of first and second graders in Knox County. All students had an up close and personal experience with deciduous and evergreen (coniferous) trees.

Students in first grade learned about the bark and heartwood of trees. They were able to handle tree 'cookies' and examine their bark and rings. Students learned that birthday for a tree creates annual ring. Lots of counting of the rings on the sample wood made the lesson success.

Students also handled cones, large and small, and smelled the conifer tree samples brought to class. After reading a book called NIGHT TREE, students created their own tree from ice cream cones. In the story, a family decorates a tree in the forest. The decorations are fruits and popcorn chains. After a discussion about how the pioneers decorated their trees with popcorn chains because they had no ornaments, a student innocently asked, "But if there were no microwaves, how was the popcorn popped?" If only we could pop corn the old fashioned way for the kids!!

Second grade students expanded their vocabulary by adding the words phloem and xylem to their science language. Using a website called Dr. Arbor, students learned that phloem moves food around the tree, and xylem moves the water. While students understood trees made oxygen, or according to them—air, they were allowed to handle four different samples of coniferous trees examine their leaves (needles). Students learned that the leaves on deciduous tree have the similar function of producing food through the process called photosynthesis. Students also learned that the annual rings can tell a story about the tree. Fatter rings suggest a lot of growth occurred that year. This might have happened because of a rainy season. After examining pine cones and learning about where the seeds are located, students made a free standing life cycle of a coniferous tree.

Use Caution This Winter When Using Space Heaters

With home heating costs on the rise this winter, many people are turning to alternate heating sources to keep costs down. If you plan to use space heaters this winter, use extreme caution.

According to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), portable and fixed space heaters caused a disproportionate share of home heating fire deaths in 2007. Space heaters were involved in 32 percent of home heating fires, but 79 percent of the deaths. In addition, heating equipment was responsible for $608 million in property

How To Choose The Right Space Heater

- Select a space heater with a guard around the flame area or heating element to protect children and clothing.
- Choose a heater that has been certified by a nationally recognized testing laboratory such as Underwriters Laboratories (UL).
- Buy a heater that is the correct size for the area you want to heat. The wrong size heater could produce more pollutants and may not be an efficient use of energy.

- Read and follow the manufacturer's operating instructions, and make sure all members of the household understand how to operate the heater safely.
- Make sure the heater has an automatic "tip-switch," a cutoff device that turns off electric or kerosene heaters if they tip

How To Prevent Space Heater Fires

- Place the heater on a level, hard, noncombustible surface.
- Keep the heater at least 3 feet from bedding, drapes, furniture or other combustible items.
- Turn off the space heater when you leave the area, and never leave a space heater on while sleeping or if you leave home.
- Keep children and pets away from space
- Do not use older space heaters or heaters with cords that are cracked or frayed.
- When used correctly, space heaters can make a cold room comfortable and can help curb heating costs during

Moffitt, Sullivan Awarded Illinois Farm Bureau's Highest Honor

CHICAGO — Illinois State Representative Don Moffitt and Illinois State Senator John Sullivan have been named the recipients of the 2016 Illinois Farm Bureau Charles B. Schuman Distinguished Service Award. The award, the highest given by IFB, was presented during the organization's annual meeting in Chicago Dec. 3-6.

Representative of Illinois' 74th district, Don Moffitt has championed agriculture and promoted the needs of Illinois farmers in the Illinois General Assembly for 23 years. Rep. Moffitt worked tirelessly to draft and pass the Illinois Livestock Management Facilities Act, which provided for environmental safeguards that met consumers' concerns while also setting building standards for livestock facilities which allowed farmers to continue operate successfully.

Rep. Moffitt also has served as the Republican spokesperson for both the Police and Fire and the Counites and Townships Committees. He has served on the Agriculture and Conservation Committee, Elementary and Secondary Education Committee, and Veterans' Affairs Committee, among others.

Prior to serving in the Illinois House of Representatives, Rep. Moffitt served as the Knox County Treasurer, Knox County Board Chairman, Knoxville alderman, and Mayor of the City of Oneida.

Outside of his legislative responsibilities, Rep. Moffitt is an active member of the Carver Community Action Agency, Galesburg Lions Club, and the Knox County Farm Bureau.

Rep. Moffitt has received numerous awards and honors, including Legislator of the Year from the Illinois EMS Alliance; Legislator of the Year from the Illinois Public Safety Alliance; Friend of Agriculture Award from IFB ACTIVATOR; Legislator of the Year from the Illinois Association for Fire Protection Districts; and Legislator of the Year from the Illinois Optometric Association.

Rep. Moffitt Received a bachelor of science degree in agriculture education and economics from the University of Illinois. He and his wife, Carolyn, have three grown children.

Illinois State Senator John Sullivan, who has represented the 47th state senate district since 2002, was awarded the IFB Charles B. Shuman Distinguished Service Award for his continuous advocacy for agriculture and efforts to draft and pass agricultural legislation at the Illinois State Capitol.

While serving as the Chairman of the Agriculture and Conservation Committee, Sen. Sullivan served as a key negotiator of successful appropriation of state monies for agricultural programs. He also used his influence to ensure successful passage of the state sales tax exemption to benefit Illinois farmers.

Outside of the Senate, Sen. Sullivan also took active roles working with Illinois Farm Adopt-A-Legislator Bureau's program and the IAA Foundation, serving as the auctioneer during the Foundation's live auction fundraiser at the IFB Annual Meeting.

Prior to serving in the Illinois

Senate, Sen. Sullivan earned his real estate and license served as a officer loan for Production Credit Association and as a farm manager and loan officer for Rushville State Bank. He is still active in his family's auction business, Sullivan Auctioneers, LLC, and manages his own farm in Schuyler County. Sullivan has been recognized often for dedication to agriculture and his work as an Illinois Senator, receiving the Friend of Agriculture award from IFB ACTIVATOR; the 2007 Paul Simon Legislative Award from the Illinois Coalition for Community Service; the 2006 Acorn Award from the Nature Conservancy; and has received multiple Friend of Agriculture and Legislator of the Year awards from the Illinois Fertilizer and Chemical Association, Illinois Pork Producers Association, and the Illinois Soybean Association.

Sen. Sullivan and his wife, Joan, have four children, Matthew, Emily, Luke and Mark.

The IFB's Distinguished Service Award honors the memory and service of Charles Shuman, a revered Moultrie County farm leader who served as president of both IFB and of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

By the Knox County Health Department

Veterinarian's Recommendations For Emergency Preparedness of Livestock Operations

- 1. Make a disaster plan to protect your property, your facilities, and your animals. Create a list of emergency telephone numbers, including those of your employees, neighbors, veterinarian, state veterinarian, poison control, local animal shelter, animal care and control, county extension service, local agricultural schools, resources for use of trailers and local volunteers.
- Have a supply of emergency medical supplies including pain meds and first aid equipment for your animals.
 When disaster strikes these items may be in high demand or be difficult for you to get to.
- Include a contact person outside the disaster area. Make sure all this information is written down and that everyone has a copy.
- 4. Make sure every animal has durable and visible permanent individual identification.
- 5. Make and maintain a list of all animals that are on site.
- Document when and where your feed and livestock came from.
- 7. Use only native and deep-rooted plants and trees in landscaping (non-native plants are less durable and hardy in your climate and may become dislodged by high winds or broken by ice and snow).
- 8. Remove all barbed wire, and consider rerouting permanent fencing so that animals may move to high ground in a flood and to low-lying areas during high winds.
 - 9. Install a hand pump and obtain enough large containers to water your animals for at least a week (municipal water supplies and wells are often contaminated during a disaster).

- 10. Identify alternate water and power sources. A generator with a safely stored supply of fuel may be essential, especially if you have electrical equipment necessary to the well being of your animals.
- 11. Secure or remove anything that could become blowing debris; make a habit of securing trailers, propane tanks, and other large objects. If you have boats, feed troughs, or other large containers, fill them with water before any high wind event. This prevents them from blowing around and also gives you an additional supply of water.
- 12. If you use heat lamps or other electrical machinery, make sure the wiring is safe and that any heat source is clear of flammable debris.
- 13. Label hazardous materials and place them all in the same safe area. Provide local fire and rescue and emergency management authorities with information about the location of any hazardous materials on your property.
- 14. Remove old buried trash—a potential source of hazardous materials during flooding that may leech into crops, feed supplies, water sources, and pasture.
- 15. Review and update your disaster plan, supplies, and information regularly.

This list adapted from and expounded upon from the Humane Society of the United States.

and the surveys showed!!

Remember those surveys you filled out in June? They have helped us here at the Farm Bureau, KCHD and the KC MRC form some informational sessions, free to everyone, teaching ways to become even BETTER prepared for emergencies and/or disasters that occur.

Here is some of what was revealed about our Knox County Farm Bureau friends and neighbors...

Nearly 23% of the surveys were returned-WOW! That's great!

Half of those who responded to the survey questions are over 65, answered 70% of the questions we asked, own at least one pet and believe that there is a more than likely chance of a disaster that could occur near where they live that would cause significant damages to the area.

75 % believe they know the types of manmade or natural dangers that could or have occurred locally to cause those disasters and are working to beef up their Readiness Kits!! Way to go!

Around 67% of respondents listen to the TV or regular radio stations for most of their emergency alerts, know a primary and secondary safe driving route, have a flashlight with batteries and a current prescription medications list set aside to use for emergencies.

Here is what those numbers tell US about YOU...

Not everyone may be as prepared for a disaster or unplanned emergency event as they could be or might like to be. We want to offer our support and ideas to help you make 3 day (and/or longer) disaster kits to have ready to use when the need presents itself. Flashlights are great, but there are other things just as (if not more) important to have ready to use in an emergency.

Anyone relying on TV or regular radio stations, using a cell phone or neighboring family members to call and report what's happening will find it's not as reliable as they might think.

Power and cable lines fall, cell towers get overloaded-dropping calls and satellites become obscured, taking the Internet and weather channel TV out of the update picture.

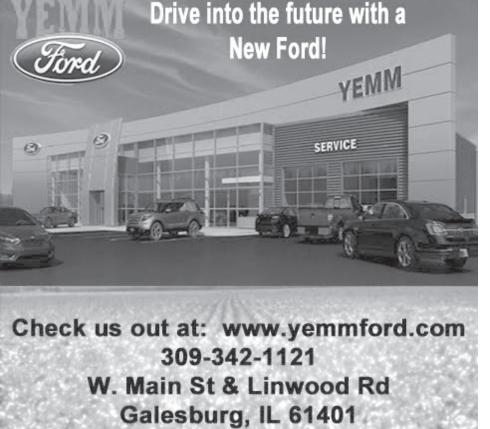

While 55% of households said YES to owning pets, only half of those people have their pet(s) included in their emergency plan/supplies. We want to be sure that your pet-whether furry, feathered or scaly, is safe with you when the need arises.

Communication is the biggest area of concern for you and your family. Most people want to know that their family is safe first, before getting help for themselves or before helping others. Only 37% of responding households stated that they have an actual communication plan already in place with family members to use in the event of an emergency or disaster. We can teach you an easy way to make an effective plan.

Your responses reveal that you have a few items tucked about the house to use in an emergency. We can teach you: 1.-how to identify things that you may already have in your home that could be used in a disaster kit and 2.-where to get the items you don't have—without breaking the bank and 3.-how to store them all in one place, as a kit, where they'll be ready when you need them.

Only 15% of you have ever been trained in First Aid. Only 17% are currently certified to perform CPR. Many people overlook these things when thinking of their own households. Emergencies and disasters WILL keep 1st responders busy elsewhere. Knowing how to care for injuries and do CPR may well keep your injured loved one alive until other help can arrive. We would like to teach you First Aid and PAY for you to learn CPR so you can help others in need.

Please join us at our informative sessions and learn to become better prepared for emergencies when they occur!

TAKEN FROM THE JANUARY 1957 BULLETIN

There was a meat cutting and cooking demonstration sponsored by Warren County Farm Bureau at Monmouth College. Demonstrators would be from the National Livestock and Meat Board. The Knox County Farm Bureau asked for 125 women to attend the day in Monmouth.

TAKEN FROM THE JANUARY 1977 BULLETIN

For the Annual Farm Bureau meeting, the Secretary of the Illinois Farm Bureau Board of Directors, Mr. Leonard Gardner, would speak about legislative issues that will soon be affecting everyone in the near future.

TAKEN FROM THE JANUARY 1997 BULLETIN

In the cold month of January, the prices of propane were skyrocketing. The worldwide demand for propane was far exceeding the demand of the domestic demand. It had been 20-30 degrees colder than the normal temperatures, so it created an increase in demand for propane. These high prices were the result of fewer oil sources to then restrict the amount of propane available to use in homes.
