Ashlyn Murdock Summer Intern

Hello Knox County! My name is Ashlyn Murdock, and I am the Knox County Farm Bureau Intern for the summer of 2023.

I grew up on a farm outside of Wataga where I raised and showed goats, swine, and cattle. I graduated from ROWVA High School in 2022. I am the daughter of Bill and Angie Murdock. Both of my parents work in healthcare. My three older brothers are all involved in the agriculture industry today. You may also know my wonderful grandmother Dorothy Murdock, my #1 supporter.

I was a Wataga Trailblazers 4-H Club memberfor ten years, and a ROWVA Chapter FFA member through high school. By growing up on a farm, showing livestock, and being involved in these organizations, I learned I wanted to make an impact in the agriculture industry. Currently, I am studying Agricultural Communications at the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign.

My freshman year at the University of Illinois was over before I knew it. I joined as many organizations as possible, as I was eager to start this next chapter in my life. I am a part of the 4-H House Cooperative Sorority, where I quickly gained 50 best friends. I am a member of the Collegiate Farm Bureau, Collegiate 4-H, and Agricultural Communicators of Tomorrow.

Ashlyn Murdock

I am continuously learning more about the agriculture industry, and with this just being my first year, I am excited to see what the next three years have in store for me!

I am happy to be the Knox County Farm Bureau Intern this summer to learn more about the agricultural industry and see how Knox County Farm Bureau helps our wonderful community!

Sunrise, set prominent lure to country living

In her earliest drawings, our daughter frequently sketched the sunset and its brilliant hues, including the shades of pink and purple most don't consider. She would compare anything fiery orange to the daily phenomenon. And since acquiring a cell phone in her teenage years, she takes photos of both the sunrise and sunset, often several times a week. She sends Snaps on Snapchat, pairing her photo with a country song for a poetic start or end to the day for her friends.

Our daughter keeps her eyes on the horizon, one of the wonders of farm and country life. Out here, we can watch the sun arrive and disappear at a horizon of Seeing the sun touch the earth ranks one of the most common reasons for living out here. At every cloudless sunrise and sunset, we feel unbound and free in peaceful solitude. For me, the daily moments create a direct connection with Mother Nature that amplifies the praise that we vocalize in unison at Sunday worship: God is good. But I would understand if any eastbound drivers heading 20 miles to work around 6 a.m. may disagree.

The sun most often determines the length of the workday, outside of late harvest nights by tractor light. Hunters hunt from dawn to dusk. We start scouting fields at daybreak, expecting the sun's length of exposure and heat to advance the crops. Farmers look to the horizon to monitor summer storms approach or drift away with their anxiety dependent on the farm's needs.

In contrast, I enjoy visiting the Chicago suburbs, where my sister-in-law thoughtfully schedules experiences with new shops, parks and beautiful urban landscapes. I trees and corn fields without obstruction. soak in doses of the city's culture, energy and especially the delicious food with accessibility. But I miss the horizon and the indescribable liberty that brings. Returning home, I look most forward to reconnecting with it

Ironically, a day this weekend started with a friend's meme of a country sunrise on Facebook. By evening, a friend texted me a sunset photo taken near the farm. Among my favorite summer sunrises is when I pull eastward into the driveway of the home farm by 6 a.m. The sun's rays cut through the trees of the pasture and accentuate the fog that hangs low in the river bottom of corn below the farmstead.

In paraphrasing Franklin Roosevelt, we hold to hope and belief in a better life beyond the horizon. I agree as long as we never overlook the good life within it.

NEWS FROM COUNTRY FINANCIAL COUNTRY COUNTRY Simple Maintenance on Backyard Equipment Can Prevent Injuries this Summer

again, and chances are, your kids are spending more time outdoors playing on backyard swing sets and trampolines, and swimming in the pool. And, just like everything else we own, these items require proper maintenance to avoid accidents. Take the time now to inspect your equipment and keep your kids (and their visitors) safe this summer.

Pool Safety

First and foremost, ensure there is a barrier surrounding your pool to keep young children from entering the area. Install a fence and alarms for any doors that enter the pool area.

Next, post your safety rules and strictly enforce them with guests. Keep a first aid kit nearby, as well as ring buoys and reach poles. Learn how to shut off filters and pumps, and post instructions for others in case of emergency.

And last, but not least, enroll children in swimming lessons, and learn CPR and first aid.

Trampoline Safety

To keep trampoline jumpers from fall-

Long summer days are here once ing off the trampoline, all trampolines should have a net and pads. Regularly inspect your trampoline to check for tears, rust or missing parts.

> Only allow one jumper at a time to prevent injuries. According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, most trampoline injuries occur when there are multiple individuals jumping at a time.

Swing Sets and Playgrounds

Take special measures to keep your backyard swing set safe for children by regularly maintaining the equipment. Check for rusted or protruding bolts, cracked swings and slides, broken ropes and open hooks.

Playgrounds should be installed on soft surfaces, like rubber mulch or tiles, to help insulate falls and prevent injury.

Are you covered?

Owning trampolines and pools can put homeowners at a higher risk of injury on their property. Talk with your insurance representative about the types of coverages available for accidents and injuries that take place on your property. Adding

Knox County GRICULTURE in the Classroomsm

After spring break, twenty one classrooms across the county started the process of hatching chicks. From preschool through sixth grade, almost 100 chicks were shared with students. Despite some power outages, and humidity and temperature issues, we can call session two of chick hatching a success!

Mrs. Maaske a science teacher at Lombard, and has raised chicks for two years. Seven of her twelve eggs produced chicks this year! Mrs. Maaske shared with Mrs. Green, the AITC coordinator, how she engages students at the 5th grade level, even though many of them have had this experience in previous years.

Mrs. Maaske places eggs in a "Mystery Box" and the students play 20 questions to guess what is inside it. Once the eggs are revealed, students look closely at a nonfertilized egg and observe it with a magnifying glass. They discuss hardness, texture, and pores. Then students crack the egg and discuss each part of it.

Mrs. Maaske uses a class chart to track the temperature and humidity of the incubator. Each day there is a new "farmer" who helps fill out the chart. Students view slides that show a picture of what the baby chick should look like as it develops inside the egg.

The students love getting their turn at taking care of the eggs and mist them days 8-18. Eggs are candled and students journal their experience. On days 19-21 the students will check on the humidity throughout class to make sure it is between 70-75%. Students work together and have ownership in the process.

On hatch days, Mrs. Maaske puts her document camera up so students can capture as many moments of the process as possible. Once the chicks hatch, classes observe the differences between the chicks, discuss their adaptations, and of course hold them! Other classes love to come visit them and it really brings joy to the classroom each year.

Men's health issues don't just affect men, though. They have a significant impact on everyone around them. This Men's Health Month, the Knox Community Health Center encourages everyone to share something vitally important with the men who matter to them: knowledge that could help them stay healthy and live longer.

One of the best things we can all do for our health and happiness is to have a close connection with a primary care provider we know and trust and keep up to date with wellness visits. The Knox Community Health Centers providers, Dr. Robert Wagner, Carol Sacco, MSN, APN, NP, and Rebecca, MSN, APRN, FNP-BC are accepting new medical patients of all ages.

"It can be difficult for anyone, but especially for men, sometimes, to speak up about their health concerns. But it's important to remember that the primary care provider's focus is helping you prevent disease and maintain good health," says Dr. Wagner, Medical Director at the Knox Community Health Center. "Regular visits and honest conversations

Encourage the men in your life to with your provider can go a long way in building the trust that is necessary for a good patient-provider relationship.

Regular checkups ensure you get the care you need, which may include:

Health screenings- You may feel fine, and you may be healthy. Or you could have a silent health problem, like high blood pressure, and not even know it.

Vaccines- Are you due for a routine vaccine, such as Tetanus? A shingles shot? Do you get the flu vaccine every year? Are you up to date with the COVID-19 vaccine? Getting recommended vaccines can help you avoid painful or serious diseases and spend more time doing the things you love.

Advice for a healthy life- Your primary care provider can discuss everything from eating right and exercising, to feelings of depression and anxiety.

Cholesterol test- Depending upon age and risk factors, some men may need their cholesterol checked.

Cancer screenings- Adult men should plan to get screened for prostate and colon cancer. Your provider can help determine when these should start and at what frequency.

Staying active- It is recommended that men incorporate 30 minutes of physical activity 5 times a week into their daily schedule.

Encourage the guys in your life to take control of their health and schedule a visit with their primary care provider.

Having a yearly physical is an important part of staying healthy. Annual physical exams and preventive health screenings detect early signs of chronic disease and allow medical providers the opportunity to discuss recommendations for good, continued health.

For more information on men's health issues or to schedule an appointment call the Knox Community Health Center at 309-344-2225 or visit our website at www. knoxcountyhealth.org for more information on the health center.
